Sustainably farmed, export quality pangasius

The Tra fish, often known as pangasius, is a medium to large sized fish native to Southeast Asia, and close to the heart of Vietnam. It's soft, flaky texture and mild flavor have made pangasius a favorite menu item in Vietnam, Cambodia and Thailand, as well as destinations around the world.

HACA Seafood offers only the highest quality fish, sustainably farm-raised using eco-friendly methodologies. Our Fishery Research Institute monitors fish daily in controlled environments similar to their natural habitats.

Pangasius is also a favorite with many health conscious consumers due to it's high source of omega 3, high protein levels, and low saturated fat. It's easy to cook and works just as well in soups as it does on the grill, fitting well into a wide variety of Eastern and Western dishes alike.

Our quick-freeze process utilizes Japanese technology to keep our fish extra fresh. No matter where you live, you can experience the beloved Vietnamese pangasius fish!

QUICK-FROZEN PANGASIUUS

Convenient frozen white-meat Pangasius fillet

Pangasius is the scientific family name for a special variety of freshwater fish that is the tenth most popular seafood eaten in the United States. There are several types of pangasius, which go by the market names: Basa, Swai and Tra. Basa has mild-to-sweet flavor, whiter meat and a flaky texture. Swai and Tra have meat that is more off-white or beige-pink and the fillets are thinner than basa and have a less flaky texture.

Our pangasius products have a low-to-medium fat content with high levels of protein. Our experienced staff makes this healthy combination possible by using nothing but high-quality feed in our aquaculture operations. All of our fish products are quick-frozen for optimal freshness.
